

The Delicate Issue of Tissue

It has been estimated that 27000 trees a DAY are consumed in the production of toilet paper. (National Geographic)

Toilet tissue made from recycled paper and wood waste is more environmentally friendly and certainly much better than Izal or newspaper as many of us older folk can testify!

We have bought (but not yet started to use) 'recycled toilet paper' from our usual supplier at slightly lower cost.

I have tried this product at home and it seems very similar to my usual 'recycled' brand.

I hope that it will prove satisfactory. What's the use of planting trees if we cut them down at this rate just to make luxury toilet paper? Let's give it a go.
